

News from Kingspan

1,400 square metres of Kingspan Kooltherm® Duct Insulation was chosen for the stunning new National Football Museum in Lancashire.

KINGSPAN INSULATION HELPS THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL MUSEUM TO KICK OFF

The 150 year history of the world's greatest game has been brought under one roof at the new National Football Museum in Lancashire, which is expected to attract more than 100,000 soccer supporters and non-supporters of all ages each year.

Kingspan Insulation Limited was among the winning team selected to ensure that the stunning new Museum, built between two stands at Preston North End's famous Deepdale stadium, will score as a world class visitor attraction in terms of comfort and safety, as well as for its many thousands of items of memorabilia, audio and visual aids and interactive attractions which make this home to one of the world's greatest football collections.

Kingspan Kooltherm® phenolic insulation was chosen as insulation for the project's Building Services because of the product's contribution to energy saving and its fire safety credentials (Class O Fire Rating and negligible smoke emission).

G C Insulation installed 1,400 square metres of Kingspan Kooltherm® Duct Insulation for the air conditioning and extraction ducting, plantroom and boiler house.

As most of the building services insulation is on public view, it was originally intended to apply a black matt finish, but the Kingspan Kooltherm® Duct Insulation was thought to be so aesthetically pleasing that a paint application was considered unnecessary.

Phillip O'Dwyer, of OMI Architects, who was the director in charge of the museum project, said: "There are a number of insulation products on the market, but we specified Kingspan because the brand is known for its high insulation values, which were a priority with this particular project - as well as for excellent technical back-up."

Kingspan Insulation can provide a series of CPD seminars on a variety of topics of interest to design and construction professionals.

Kingspan Insulation offers an extensive range of insulation solutions for both newbuild and refurbishment projects. Specifiers, stockists and contractors are supported with a comprehensive and free technical advisory service.
